

QUT Digital Repository:
<http://eprints.qut.edu.au/>

Page, James S. (2008) Peace Education: Exploring Ethical and Philosophical Foundations. Information Age Publishing.

Table of Contents

© Copyright 2008 Information Age Publishing

PEACE EDUCATION: EXPLORING ETHICAL AND PHILOSOPHICAL FOUNDATIONS.

The chapter headings, sections and subsections for the book are as follows:

Chapter One: The Problem of Peace Education

1.1. The current status of peace education

- 1.1.1. Recent literature and development
- 1.1.2. Peace education and international instruments
- 1.1.3. Institutional status of peace education

1.2. Critical issues in peace education and research

- 1.2.1. Defining peace
- 1.2.2. Understanding peace research
- 1.2.3. Peace research, peace education and peace advocacy

1.3. Statement of problem

- 1.3.1. The problematic nature of peace education
- 1.3.2. The dearth of a philosophical rationale for peace education

1.4. Research method and assumptions

- 1.4.1. The nature of the investigation
- 1.4.2. The rehabilitation of prejudice and preunderstanding
- 1.4.3. Limitations of the investigation
- 1.4.4. Overview of the thesis

Chapter Two: Virtue Ethics and Peace Education

2.1. The revival of virtue ethics

- 2.1.1. Reasons for revival
- 2.1.2. Demarcation
- 2.1.3. The appeal of virtue ethics for education
- 2.1.4. Preview

2.2. Classical virtue ethics and peace education

- 2.2.1. Religion, virtue ethics and peace education
- 2.2.2. Plato, virtue ethics and peace education
- 2.2.3. Aristotle, virtue ethics and peace education
- 2.2.4. Augustine, virtue ethics and peace education
- 2.2.5. Thomas Aquinas, virtue ethics and peace education

2.3. Postclassical virtue ethics and peace education

- 2.3.1. Desiderius Erasmus, virtue ethics and peace education
- 2.3.2. Benedictus de Spinoza, virtue ethics and peace education
- 2.3.3. David Hume, virtue ethics and peace education
- 2.3.4. Immanuel Kant, virtue ethics and peace education

2.4. Modern virtue ethics and peace education I

- 2.4.1. Nicolai Hartmann, virtue ethics and peace education
- 2.4.2. John Dewey, virtue ethics and peace education
- 2.4.3. Gandhi, virtue ethics and peace education

- 2.4.4. Dietrich Bonhoeffer, virtue ethics and peace education
- 2.5. Modern virtue ethics and peace education II
  - 2.5.1. Martin Luther King, virtue ethics and peace education
  - 2.5.2. Elizabeth Anscombe, virtue ethics and peace education
  - 2.5.3. Alasdair McIntyre, virtue ethics and peace education
  - 2.5.4. Rosalind Hursthouse, virtue ethics and peace education
  - 2.5.5. Popular virtue ethics and peace education
  - 2.5.6. The virtues of civility and co-operation
  - 2.5.7. Radical Christian virtue ethics and peace education
- 2.6. Summation
  - 2.6.1. Strengths/weaknesses of virtue ethics (and peace education)
  - 2.6.2. Recapitulation

Chapter Three: Consequentialist Ethics and Peace Education

- 3.1. The origins of consequentialism
  - 3.1.1. Consequentialism defined
  - 3.1.2. Reasons for the rise of consequentialism
  - 3.1.3. Consequentialism and the notion of the future
  - 3.1.4. Preview
- 3.2. Early consequentialist writers and peace education
  - 3.2.1. Francis Hutcheson, consequentialism and peace education
  - 3.2.2. David Hume, consequentialism and peace education
  - 3.2.3. Jeremy Bentham, consequentialism and peace education
  - 3.2.4. John Stuart Mill, consequentialism and peace education
  - 3.2.5. Marx-Engels, consequentialism and peace education
- 3.3. Modern consequentialism and peace education
  - 3.3.1. Richard Hare, consequentialism and peace education
  - 3.3.2. Social reconstructionism, consequentialism and peace education
  - 3.3.3. Critical literacy, critical pedagogy and peace education
  - 3.3.4. Richard Peters, consequentialism and peace education
  - 3.3.5. Nonviolence, consequentialism and peace education
- 3.4. Summation
  - 3.4.1. Strengths and weaknesses of consequentialist ethics (and peace education)
  - 3.4.2. Recapitulation

Chapter Four: Conservative Political Ethics and Peace Education

- 4.1. The revival of conservative political ethics
  - 4.1.1. Conservative political theory and ethics
  - 4.1.2. Intellectual political conservatism
  - 4.1.3. Preview
- 4.2. Classical conservative political ethics and peace education
  - 4.2.1. Plato, conservative political ethics and peace education
  - 4.2.2. Aristotle, conservative political ethics and peace education
  - 4.2.3. Christianity, conservative political ethics and peace education

4.3. Postclassical conservative political ethics and peace education

- 4.3.1. Thomas Hobbes, conservative political ethics and peace education
- 4.3.2. David Hume, conservative political ethics and peace education
- 4.3.3. Edmund Burke, conservative political ethics and peace education
- 4.3.4. G.W.F. Hegel, conservative political ethics and peace education

4.4. Modern conservative politics ethics and peace education

- 4.4.1. Michael Oakeshott, conservative political ethics and peace education
- 4.4.2. Anthony Quinton, conservative political ethics and peace education
- 4.4.3. Russell Kirk, conservative political ethics and peace education
- 4.4.4. Roger Scruton, conservative political ethics and peace education
- 4.4.5. Rudolph Rummel, democide and peace education
- 4.4.6. Kenneth Boulding and conservative peace theory
- 4.4.7. Conservative political ethics and the culture of peace

4.5. Summation

- 4.5.1. Strengths and weaknesses of conservative political ethics (and peace education)
- 4.5.2. Recapitulation

Chapter Five: Aesthetic Ethics and Peace Education

5.1. The revival of aesthetic ethics

- 5.1.1. Reasons for the revival
- 5.1.2. Demarcation
- 5.1.3. Preview

5.2. Classical aesthetic ethics and peace education

- 5.2.1. Classicism, aesthetic ethics and peace education
- 5.2.2. Plato, aesthetic ethics and peace education
- 5.2.3. Hebrew aesthetic ethics and peace education
- 5.2.4. Buddhism, aesthetic ethics and peace education
- 5.2.5. Christianity, aesthetic ethics and peace education
- 5.2.6. Augustine, aesthetic ethics and peace education
- 5.2.7. Thomas Aquinas, aesthetic ethics and peace education
- 5.2.8. Islam, aesthetic ethics and peace education

5.3. Postclassical aesthetic ethics and peace education

- 5.3.1. Desiderius Erasmus, aesthetic ethics and peace education
- 5.3.2. David Hume, aesthetic ethics and peace education
- 5.3.3. Adam Smith, aesthetic ethics and peace education

5.4. Kantian aesthetic ethics and peace education

- 5.4.1. Kant's anti-aesthetic ethics
- 5.4.2. Kant's peace works
- 5.4.3. How anti-aesthetic is Kant really?

5.5. Modern aesthetic ethics and peace education

- 5.5.1. Søren Kierkegaard, aesthetic ethics and peace education
- 5.5.2. Deweyan aesthetic ethics and peace education
- 5.5.3. Albert Schweitzer, aesthetic ethics and peace education

5.5.4. Language, beauty, imagination and peace education

5.5.5. Aesthetic ethics and a culture of peace

5.6. Summation

5.6.1. Strengths and weaknesses of aesthetic ethics (and peace education)

5.6.2. Recapitulation

Chapter Six: The Ethics of Care and Peace Education

6.1. The emergence of care ethics

6.1.1. Origins of care ethics

6.1.2. Critics of care ethics

6.1.3. Preview

6.2. Precursors to care ethics and peace education

6.2.1. Aesara of Luciana, care ethics and peace education

6.2.2. Religion, care ethics and peace education

6.2.3. Augustine, care ethics and peace education

6.2.4. Thomas Aquinas, care ethics and peace education

6.2.5. Existentialism, care ethics and peace education

6.2.6. Heideggerian care ethics and peace education

6.3. Critical issues in care ethics and peace education

6.3.1. Care ethics as feminist ethics

6.3.2. Care as a virtue

6.3.3. Care ethics as situation ethics

6.3.4. Sara Ruddick, care ethics and peace education

6.3.5. Joseph Kunkel, care ethics and peace education

6.4. The application of care ethics to peace education

6.4.1. Partnership, relationship and rights

6.4.2. Caring, healing and the classroom

6.5. Summation

6.5.1. Strengths and weaknesses of care ethics (and peace education)

6.5.2. Recapitulation

Chapter Seven: Conclusions

7.1. Review of the investigation

7.1.1. Recapitulation and reflection

7.1.2. Metaphilosophical considerations

7.1.3. Why not peace education as a duty?

7.2 Implications of the investigation

7.2.1. The need for a holistic and integrative approach to peace education

7.2.2. Pedagogical implications of the investigation

7.2.3. Directions for future research